reform of the Militia system is all that will be then wanting to ensure to us peace, by securing us the means of repelling aggression if attempted.

Whilst the general government thus moves on in its peculiar sphere, it is gratifying to witness the gradual but firm march of the individual states in the path of internal improvement. Among these, in the organization of her means, and the system under which they are improved and dispensed, Virginia appears to us to have taken the lead. We have, with pleasure, found room for the Reports of the state of her two great Funds for education and internal improvement; and sincerely wish that every one of our Republics possessed means as ample, and the disposition to employ them in the same manner as that enlightened state.

The return of the Militia of Alabama, for 1818, which we have seen since the report from the War Department to Congress, shews 28 regiments, and an aggregate strength of 10,309.

MARRIED near Greensboro', on Wednesday evening last, by the Reverend L. Pierce, Doctor HOWE H. TIGNER, to Miss ELIZA A. GLENN.

The gentleman who forwarded the following for publication, is known to the editors of this paper, as a man of the first respectability. His name, if necessary, will be given.

Richmond, (Va.) December 25.

It is due to public justice and to society at large to make known, that HUGH M. PETTUS, has lately absconded from Virginia, leaving behind him a wife and two children, and without a house or home, his wife and his children, his aged and kind mother, who had surrendered to her, her rights to him, and his still more aged grandmother, whose property I am told he also had. This man has for some time been making arrangements to remove to Georgia, and had previously transferred nearly all his property to that state. On the day of his leaving his wife and family, he by previous assignation, took off with him a young woman of the most respectable connexions, whom he seduced from a disconsolate mother—it is believed they will halt in Georgia, and among strangers, he may endeavor to pass her off as his wife. Publicity is given to this infamous transaction with the view, that the finger of scorn may be pointed at these adventurers wherever they go; that all respectable people of Georgia or elsewhere may regard them in a proper point of view; in fine, that all who respect the divine and civil obligation of the marriage vow may give them that place in society which they merit.

Editors in the southern and western states and territories, may render a service to the community by publishing the foregoing.
